Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

NASHVILLE, with the largest peach orchard in the world, resolves to get some of the glory that heretofore has gone to the Crowley Ridge section with its annual Peach Festival at Forrest City. And so on Thursday—the same day that Forrest City's Festival opens—Nashville launches its first one, to run through Saturday night.

NEW ORLEANS, La. —(P)—Carrying out Senator Long's threat, to take over the tax authority in New Orleans, the state Thursday appointed tax assessors throughout the city, superseding the assessors elected by the city last January.

Long Retreats

NEW ORLEANS, La. —(P)—After Mayor T. Thomas Walmley had mustered more men and guns than Senator Huey P. Long in their police-militia "war" Adj. Gen. Raymond H. Fleming announced Wednesday night that half of the senator's national guardsmen were being demobilized.

Gov. O. K. Allen at Baton Rouge almost simultaneously broadened his proclamation of partial martial law and ordered the state soldiers to scurry throughout the city and "uncover" without the use of any force "any evidence of vice, gambling and graft."

Almost 1,500 city police under Mayor Walmley, armed with pistols, rifles and riot guns, are ready to engage the guardsmen if an attempt is made to usurp the New Orleans government.

Adjutant General Fleming, from his headquarters at Jackson Barracks, where 500 militiamen were under arms said he dismissed half the 300 men called out because they were not needed.

"We are just going to keep as many men on duty as are necessary," he said. "We can get the others out at a moment's notice, anyhow. We might even let some more men go tomorrow."

A report that additional guardsmen were being brought in from another state to reinforce the local guardsmen was denied by the adjutant general.

The gambling raids order shifted attention from reported raids by the troopers, called out by Governor Allen, at the request of Senator Long, to seize the police department and the city hall. Today's order of the governor directed that no force was to be used in its execution.

Bloodshed Feared
Meanwhile, Mayor Walmley, head of the city administration and opponent of Long, held its augmented police force in readiness to maintain the "rights of the city of self government."

The soldiers were bivouacked at the Jackson Barracks while the policemen remained at headquarters. Outwardly the city was calm, but leaders of both sides agreed that any overt move probably would bring bloodshed.

Mayor Walmley had been informed that the Long forces might make an attempt to take over the Police Department at noon today when the new Police Commission, created by the recent Long-dominated legislature was authorized by the law to take office. The Walmley faction previously had obtained a restraining order in court to prevent the commission's functioning and the mayor said he would enforce the court's order with armed police if Long's troops appeared. But the tension of the situation was relieved when noon passed and no move was made by Long.

Myers Vanished Fearing Scandal

Boy Explains His Flight
—But Father Blames
Himself

NORMAN, Okla. —(P)—Neal Myers, 21-year-old University of Oklahoma student, was locked in a county jail cell Wednesday to await a preliminary hearing on charges he murdered his college sweetheart, Marian Mills, in a purported effort to prevent matrimony.

Myers, who gave himself up after authorities had sought him for three weeks in connection with the death of the campus beauty queen, pleaded not guilty when he was arraigned.

"I had to get out, I couldn't stand to think of the scandal and disgrace it would bring on my family and on Marian's family," he said in explanation of his flight after Miss Mills' death.

County Attorney Paul Updegraff asserting the youth's only motive for flight, was to escape prosecution, declared:

"He knew he was wanted. Under the law he is guilty of murder and he will be prosecuted vigorously."

Dr. F. B. Myers of El Reno, Neal's father, told newspapermen that he felt the blame for his son's plight, partially "rests on me."

"I was a stern, strict father. I told my boy I expected him to stay out of trouble. I see my mistake now. I should have told him to do everything possible to avoid trouble, but should get in trouble, to come first to me. I am that because of my strictness. Neal got in trouble and was afraid to come to me."

Updegraff disclosed for the first time an instrumental operation had preceded Miss Mills' death July 10. Previously death had been attributed to the use of "quick remedies" in an effort to defuse the situation.

Myers insisted he had asked Marian "many, many times" to marry him. He would not say why she refused.

"I asked her before—even before this trouble came up," he said. "Even

Peach Festival at Nashville Opens

Texarkana Sends Motorcade—Festival Thursday, Friday, Saturday

Automobile parties were heading from Texarkana, Hope and other southwest Arkansas points Thursday for the first annual Peach Festival at Nashville, opening Thursday and running through Saturday night.

Texarkana was represented by a vast motorcade from the chamber of commerce and other community organizations of that city. Hope had no official representation, but scores of citizens planned to visit their neighboring city on the opening day.

Nashville is the center of the largest peach district in the state and seven miles from the largest peach orchard in the world.

Festivities will open at 2:30 p. m. with a mile-long parade of decorated floats and cars which will start from the high school building and pass down Main street to the show grounds on West Main. The parade will be led by 12 beautiful girls, followed by Boy Scouts and the Nashville band. "Queen Elberta" will follow, with visiting princesses riding in separate cars. At 3 p. m. the Flying Aces air circus will perform.

At 8 p. m. a pageant, with 150 Nashville residents taking part, will be held at the high school auditorium when Miss Mary Honeycutt of Nashville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Honeycutt, will be crowned Queen Elberta, followed by the Queen's ball at the American Legion but on West Main street. Queen Elberta will reign throughout three-day festival.

Majors of honor are: Misses Cornelia J. Sutherland, Marjorie Scroggin, Elizabeth Hughes, Louise Utey, Lois Dodson, Helen Ruth Moxley, all of Nashville; Blevins, Miss Marie Ward; Murfreesboro, Miss Eunice Ruth Alford; Centerville, Miss Emily Loyd; Columbus, Miss Ruth Clendenen; Dierks, Miss Bernice Medlen; Saratoga, Miss Janice Spates; Ashdown, Miss Williams.

Ball games will be played between Nashville and Okay Thursday, Nashville and DeQueen Friday, and Nashville and Amity, Saturday.

Arrangements are being made to take care of 7,000 visitors during the festival. The program will be handled by the Legion post.

Choice peaches from leading orchards will be placed on exhibition. Practically every business firm in Nashville will enter a float in the parade.

50-Cents-Per-Hour Wage

Move

FOUR ARE BEATEN

Sporadic Picketing by Strikers Produces New Violence

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. —(P)—Immediate termination of the truck drivers' strike was proposed Thursday by the employers' advisory committee, which recommended a wage scale of 50 cents an hour for drivers and 40 cents an hour for other workers in certain classifications.

The new plan was announced simultaneously with sporadic picketing by strikers, resulting in the beating of four truck operators and the disabling of several vehicles.

Federal mediators, the Rev. Francis Haas and E. H. Dunnigan, planned their next moves in efforts to break the impasse between strikers and employer during the quiet that followed in the wake of Wednesday's marching men with rifles, machine guns, and bayonets, who nipped in the bud the scheme of strikers to halt all trucks by force.

Plodding pavements in the gray light of early Wednesday morning, 1,000 men here to enforce military rule which strikers defied, came to headquarters of the drivers. Troops arrested two ringleaders, confiscated 40 automobiles, and dispersed several score occupants.

Widespread attacks on moving trucks resulted. Several drivers were beaten and slugged, some vehicles tipped, and other operators frightened from their machines. Arrests followed and in turn, the second raid of the day that forced out some 200 men and women in the Central Labor Union's offices adjacent the heart of the downtown district.

Troopers in 20 army trucks lined the street before the Central's offices, dispersing 2,000 spectators outside, and searched and questioned occupants of the buildings. Among them was State Representative Roy E. Wier, active in labor circles.

Union representatives later were allowed to use their office though guards were maintained over the building.

Navy to Reduce Airplane Plans

Instead of 2,184, Strength
May Be Fixed at
Only 1,910

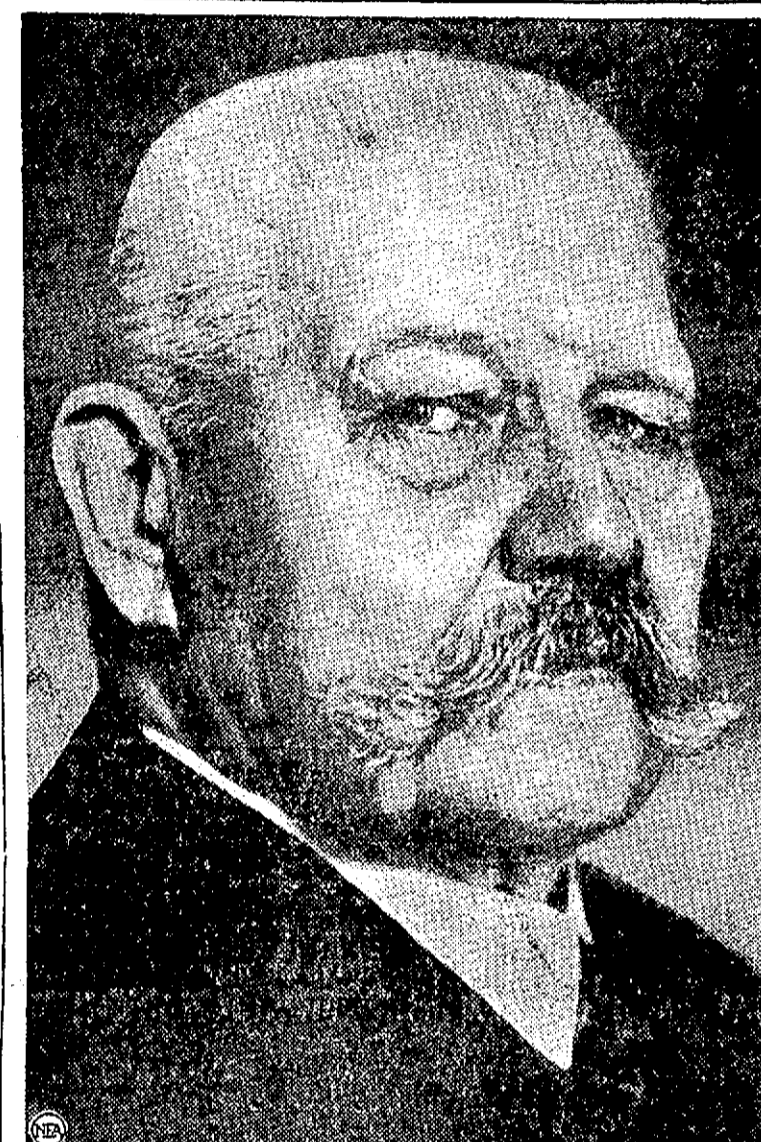

WASHINGTON —(P)—The naval high command was disclosed authoritatively Wednesday night to have determined on a sharp reduction in naval aviation construction.

Present plans, which may be altered, call for 274 fewer planes than the 2,184 which the navy had decided would be necessary under the Vinson bill authorizing a treaty strength navy by 1942. A thousand planes now comprise the naval air force, and plans had evolved to build the other 1,184 in annual installments.

High officials now have reduced the total tentatively to 1,910 planes as adequate for peacetime navy requirements. The total may be cut slightly again before a final one is reached.

The reduction includes 34 craft which would have been assigned to a proposed flying deck cruiser which the navy has decided not to lay down.

U.S. to Be Barren Like China If Soil Erosion Isn't Stopped

Open P. White of "Colliers" Gives a Dreadful
Prophecy

LITTLE ROCK —(P)—Devastating droughts that have gripped principal farming areas of the United States in recent years are the logical and unavoidable consequence of widespread and destructive soil erosion, Owen P. White, feature writer for Collier's Weekly, said Wednesday night.

Mr. White stopped overnight in Little Rock en route to Dallas. He is concluding an exhaustive survey of soil erosion and drought conditions in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Iowa and other states, and is writing for Collier's Weekly an article based on his investigations.

Abuse Almost Indescribable
"The tragic abuse and wanton neglect of natural resources in this country almost surpasses description," Mr. White said. "Once ours was a fertile and well-forested continent, with an ample layer of that priceless topsoil which cannot be replaced. In the past 60 years 160,000,000 acres of farming land have been irreparably injured. When topsoil is destroyed, it cannot be restored by any artificial or natural means. The average topsoil of the entire United States is only 7 1/2 inches in depth at the present time. It takes 400 years for nature to make one inch of topsoil. On an appalling area of our farming territory, only the subsoil, or perhaps a thin and inadequate layer of topsoil, remains. Land that has once been completely eroded can only be returned to the growth of timber, which of course is rooted in the subsoil."

When ground is planted on a five per cent slope, with an average of 7 1/2 inches of rainfall per year, the topsoil washes away at the rate of 98 tons annually. If there is twice as much rain, four times as much soil is lost.

Mr. White said that China, with its barren, rain-washed slopes, its enormous eroded gullies and ravines, its multiplied thousands of acres of futilely useless farming land, is a typical subsoil country. At one time, he said, China was as fertile and protected an area as the United States in its pioneer days. We are threatened with the same fate under present abusive farming practices, he added, and this will also be a subsoil country if not taken by the farmers of this country.

Agricultural researchers of the University's College of Agriculture who will be in charge of the project are: Deane G. Carter, agricultural engineer; J. B. Woods, assistant agricultural engineer; Dr. R. P. Bartholomew and Dr. L. C. Kapp, assistant agronomists.

Announcement was made here Thursday that Chancellor Adolf Hitler had assumed the presidency upon von Hindenburg's death.

When word came that the president was dead, Hitler and his Nazi cabinet were prepared.

Palmer Bridges Succumbs
After Amputation
of Arm

LAKE VILLAGE —Palmer Bridges, 39, trusty guard, who fled from the state convict farm at Tucker Monday died at the Lake Village Infirmary here Wednesday.

Surgeons had expected his death following the amputation of his arm. The arm was shattered by a rifle bullet when he made a move to resist capture as a posse from the convict farm intercepted him and three other fugitives on the road between Lake Village and Montrose. Bridges lost so much blood before he reached the hospital here that there was virtually no chance for him to survive.

The body was taken to Tucker this afternoon. He has three children living in Prairie county. He was sentenced in 1931 to serve life imprisonment for murder. He had been a trusty for 16 months.

John Savage, convicted robber, who led his three companions to Vicksburg, Miss., to find $1,700 in buried treasure, apparently had escaped.

Vicksburg police reported they had been unable to locate him.

Your Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHER

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Heart Disease Deaths Rise With Life Span

The death rate from heart disease in the United States in 1930 was 132 for each 100,000 of the population. In 1933 it was 224 per 100,000, an increase of approximately 70 per cent.

Some of this increase is due to the fact that more people are living longer, and that they must die of some disease, or at least, from a breaking down of the body generally. Since the future of the heart is associated with death, it is reasonable to believe that as more people live longer, more and more will die of heart disease.

However, other factors are involved in this increase. One is the improvement in the ability of doctors to diagnose certain types of heart disease, such as those affecting the coronary arteries or the small blood vessels which supply the heart itself with blood.

Another important factor is the increase in frequency of heart disease in people past 30 years of age.

In previous generations many people died of infectious diseases of childhood. Now they tend to avoid these diseases or to recover from them, but sometimes there is sufficient damage to the heart to show itself in the increased number of deaths after 30 years of age.

The various types of heart disease vary in different parts of the country. Rheumatic fever predominates as a cause of heart disease in the north and east portions of the United States, but is much less in the southern portions.

In the western and southern portions of the country, high blood pressure and hardening of the arteries are associated with the increase in heart disease.

The figures show that heart disease is twice as frequent in the northeast portions of the United States as in the far south, while the middle west and central states are just between the two.

That type of heart disease which is called hypertensive, and which is associated with high blood pressure, seems to be increasing and is said to be incident to the increased strain and complexity of modern life. It is a remarkable observation that native Chinese seldom have high blood pressure, but develop the condition when transplanted into the life of the United States.

Among African natives, high blood pressure is seldom seen, but the direct descendants of the African natives in this country have a higher incidence of abnormally high blood pressure than do white people living in the same districts.

High blood pressure, therefore, is to a large extent a total personality reaction to modern civilization.

Finds His America Is a Land to Love
—New York Critic Tells of a Tour of Discovery

By BRUCE CATTION

Lewis Gannett, New York literary critic, wheeled out the family Ford last summer and set out to have a look at the United States. He went all the way to California and back, and he fell violently in love with his country; and now he tells all about it in an appealing little book, "Sweet Land."

The automobile, says Mr. Gannett, is restoring the American's old intimacy with his nation. People no longer travel impersonally; they get acquainted along the way, they savor the salty characteristics of the different sections, they come to know the land as it used to be known in the pre-railroad age.

The result—in Mr. Gannett's case, at least—is a new patriotism, a new pride in citizenship.

Most of us, I suspect, are very much like him in that we more or less take our country for granted. When we once break out of our accustomed groove, and go roaming about to see what is to be seen, the vastness and the power and the splendor of it all are nothing less than breath-taking.

We discover, suddenly, that there is a vast fringedness in the land, a tremendous energy, an honest engagement with things that are earthy and satisfying; and we discover, too, that our land contains infinite beauty and incalculable riches of pure romance.

Like Mr. Gannett, we find, in the end,

SOPHIE KERR'S GREAT NOVEL "STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

By Sophie Kerr

BEHOLD HERE TODAY

JANE KERR comes to New York determined to show her home town, Marburg, and especially AMY JACKSON, that she can make a success of her life. Amy has been her best friend until HOWARD JACKSON broke the engagement. Jane had forced upon him and married Amy.

In New York Jane obtains a position in a real estate office and soon is making a large income. She has no affair with HOWARD JACKSON, married, but tries to win him back.

Months pass and Amy's ann is born. Howard arrives home for a week, and...

NOW ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXVII

HOWARD felt better next morning though he was still ailing, and shivery and exasperated by it. "Such a dumb thing to happen—didn't realize how chilly it was outside yesterday. I'll buy me a dozen extra handkerchiefs before I get on the train and throw them away."

"And do take care of yourself, Howard," begged Amy. "When you get to this new camp don't try to do too much until you're over this. Stay in your quarters and keep warm. Miss Tyler says that's the best thing to do. And don't write me any letters saying you're all over it unless you are!"

He telegraphed when he reached the camp that his cold was better than that of mountains of work that there was no likelihood of overseas orders immediately.

Miss Tyler had packed her uniform and departed. Amy was at most at her full strength. Nancy was home again. Howard Second was a pound and a half heavier and the early April sunshine was bringing a thin promise of spring in Marburg. In New York Jane Terry was sitting in her office frowning over a bill of costs for repairs in a building under her management, when Mrs. Andrews came in agitatedly to say that there was an aviation officer outside who "seems to be sick or something—he's acting very strangely." Behind her, flushed and staring, Howard Jackson staggered and almost fell on the threshold.

"Jane," he stammered, "I'm very sick. My side, it struck me like a knife—in the street. And my head—" he caught at her dress for support, but his hands slipped and he collapsed before it. The two women, panic-stricken, tried to lift him into a chair, but he was too far gone. They managed to straighten him, but he lay insensible on the floor.

"He's burning up with fever!" said Mrs. Andrews. "It must be flu, or pneumonia. I'd better notify the military authorities, or the police—they'll get him to a hospital."

Jane was on the floor beside him, holding his head. "You order a private ambulance," she said violently. "I'll take him to my apartment and call a doctor there." Then, as she met Mrs. Andrews' blank astonishment, she added: "The hospitals are such death-traps—and he's a relation—a distant cousin."

IN the ambulance she held him again. Once he opened his eyes and, seeing her, tried to explain, muttering, drawing his breath hard. "Phone the camp—please—don't let Amy know I'm so sick—that cold—hung on—and hung on—" and then his words became delirium.

How he had found her she did not know or care. She had him now and in the short ambulance ride she had time to map her course. How lavishly, how tenderly she would take care of him, nurse him back to health and strength. And he would be so grateful... they would begin all over again. He would come back to her... she built it up into a satisfactory drama, herself the gracious, radiant heroine.

He did not return to consciousness while they took him into her apartment, undressed him and got him into her own bed, and she began to be more and more alarmed about him. It was hard to find doctors, but at last one came, a dour man who at first examined with horror, but also with authority. "This man's got pneumonia, one of the worst types, I should say. He's pretty far gone, too. I'll order oxygen and try to find you a good nurse, but they're scarce as snuff. You ought to have two or three."

"Get everything you need. The money doesn't matter," broke in Jane.

—but even then—I don't believe he's got a chance—not if it's Number Three. You'd better notify his superior officers right away—"

AS she listened to him her spanned drama of rescue and reconciliation crashed in panic. As the doctor hung up the phone she clutched his arm. "Do you really mean—that he's going to—die—that he hasn't a chance?"

He looked at her with a little more humanity. "He cannot live more than three—or four days, unless by some miracle I'm mistaken and it's not Number Three." "But it's not true—you must make him live!" she cried. "I won't have it, I tell you, it can't be that he should die—like that—" "You won't help him by making a scene," he replied roughly. "Be quiet. We've got to work." As she stared, still combative, the understanding of what she had done rushed over her. She hung up her arms in a frantic gesture and in one short sentence unwittingly expressed her complete character.

"Oh, my God!" she cried. "What nuisance have I wished on myself!" It was, Jane soon discovered, far worse than she could ever have imagined. The picture of herself as a ministering angel faded in the smell of disinfectants, the dismal paraphernalia of a hospital room superimposed on a decorative living place nurses who used her as an errand girl and constantly demanded the impossible, visits from Howard's blunt colonel, who told her nastily that if she'd used her head and taken him to the proper place he might have lived, while Howard himself lay under the oxygen tent and pitiously fought for breath. There was, she felt, no possible inconvenience, slight, insult or abominable treatment which she and her belongings did not receive from these disgusting interlopers, as she now considered them, yet her presence was necessary unless she wanted to see the place still farther wrecked and ravaged. As a final blow the colonel informed her that he had telegraphed for Captain Jackson's family and would himself bring them there, as soon as they arrived, but he could not tell her exactly when that would be.

IT was then that the last vestiges of Jane's morale forsook her. She was tired to the bone. She was guilty. She was afraid, terribly afraid. She did not know exactly what this fear was, but it was destroying her. She would, she determined, go to a hotel, leaving no address, and let her apartment and her two servants suffer whatever further indignities the doctors and nurses and loathsome army officers wanted to put on them.

Dishevelled and distracted and shaking with nerves, she was trying to do this when the door of her living room opened, very much as it had opened on that July day nearly four years ago, and Amy stood before her, as white, as trembling, as herself.

"Where is he?" asked Amy. "Oh, Jane—he isn't!"

Jane didn't move, her tone was a warning. "No, he isn't dead. How did you get here so soon—you're not by yourself?"

"Father and the colonel—there was some trouble with the taxi-man—I came up ahead. Jane, where is he? I must see him!"

All of the rancor she had ever felt for Amy, all of the poison sprung from the last three dreadful days, were motive in Jane's answer. Here, in her presence, was the first cause of it all. Amy was to blame for everything. She had thwarted and injured and outraged Jane knowingly, wishfully, but now, now Jane comprehended instantly, was the one great chance, before anyone else appeared, to strike at Amy and satisfy her hate to the very utmost. She dropped the bag in her hand and spoke fast.

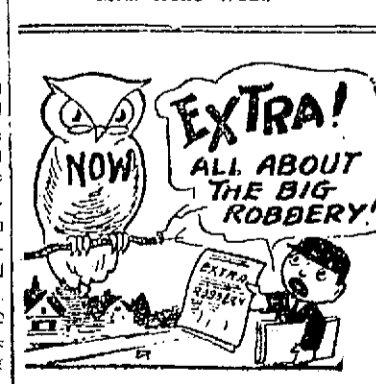

"You must have wondered why I'm going to tell you. He's been with me from the very first day since he came up to the new camp. We planned it a long time ago. He's always wanted me. He loves me. Do you understand, Amy—he's been my lover all these four weeks. He wanted me all the time. He told me so. He never really loved anyone but me, just as I loved him—"

Senator Wagner in Auto Accident

New Yorker and Congressman Injured Avoiding Truck Collision

WESTPORT, N. Y., (AP)—Swerving his automobile to avoid hitting a truck United States Senator Robert F. Wagner was injured Wednesday. Representative Anning S. Pratt of Staten Island, enroute with Senator Wagner to a fishing camp in Quebec, was hurt more severely.

Dr. Harold J. Harriss, local physician, who treated the injured men, said they could be moved Thursday to their homes in New York.

Wagner and Pratt were enroute to the Siegeny club at Lucerne, in Quebec province, Canada, for fishing. Senator Wagner was driving. Between Westport and Wadhams where the highway through the mountains is winding and narrow, the senator in passing one truck on a curve left the highway to avoid hitting another truck coming from the opposite direction.

The car dropped 20 feet into a brook but did not turn over. The two men were hurled against the dashboard and windshield. Passing motorists brought them to Dr. Harriss' office. The scene of the accident is on the New York-Albany-Montreal highway. The road at that point skirts Lake Champlain. Westport is about 110 miles north of Albany.

NO MORE YELLOW SKIN FOR HOWETT

C. R. Howett, salesman, writes: "I have delayed answering your letter as I have been waiting to see the results of taking your medicine. I did as you advised, took one bottle Mendenhall's Chill and Fever Tonic, without arsenic and followed with the chill tonic with arsenic and have taken two bottles. People all over my territory are complimenting me on my looks as my skin is no longer yellow and the jaundiced look and chronic malaria and chills have left me. I thank you a thousand times and you may use my name any time you wish, as I feel that I am cured. Mendenhall's Chill Tonic, without arsenic, should be taken in place of quinine for malaria, chills, fevers, colds, 'flu' or grippe. Mendenhall's Chill Tonic, with arsenic, is the most successful agent in the treatment of chronic malaria, bilious, intermittent or malarial fever. ## Judge Increases Penalty on Press

Kentuckian Imprisons Reporters During Working Hours

DANVILLE, Ky., (AP)—Judge J. W. Harland meted out punishment twice Wednesday to the two young newspaper men who have continued, since July 21, to refuse to answer questions which they contend would violate a newspaper confidence.

In place of sending them to jail in the evening, as he has been doing for the last week, Judge Harland called Jack Durham and Wesley Carly into court Wednesday morning and sentenced them to six hours in jail during daylight hours, which prevented them from working. Late in the afternoon Judge Harland called the two reporters back into court and assessed fines of $3 and costs each.

The judge ordered Durham and Carly to reappear in court at 9 Thursday morning.
Victor Bodner, 24, and Lucian Christman, 21, were called into court and questioned concerning the same case in which Durham and Carly have refused to testify—the hanging in effigy of State Representative J. Sterling Towles. Both refused to answer questions on the ground that to do so might be self-incriminating. They were directed to return to court tomorrow afternoon.

To date Durham and Carly have spent 38 hours in jail and paid fines, including costs, totalling $22 each for their stand.

Wednesday's daylight sentences prompted the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times to offer a substitute for Carly, city editor of the Kentucky Advocate here, if continued jail sentences constitute an emergency for his paper.

Gov. Ruby Laffoon at Frankfort, who received a telegram from Johnathan Eddy, executive secretary of the American Newspaper Guild in New York, said he might reply to Eddy but indicated he had no authority to interfere in a contempt case. Eddy denied the governor's protesting against the daily sentences as a "travesty on justice" and asking the chief executive to intervene.

man who was deposed as chief executive of the state two weeks ago, was named by the party's State Central Committee to make the gubernatorial race in November only a few minutes after her husband had resigned the nomination. She was designated a "vindication" candidate to lead the Langer faction by a vote of 36 to 9.

Mrs. Langer, a new comer in politics will lead the ticket which her husband led to a smashing primary victory only two days before he was convicted and sentenced to 18 months imprisonment on a charge of conspiracy to solicit political contributions from federal relief workers.

Langer resigned the nomination after became apparent his right to make the race would be challenged on the grounds that his sentence for a federal

Tennessee Goes to Polls on Thursday

Volunteer State Voting for Governor and Two Senators

NASHVILLE, Tenn., (AP)—Nominations for governor, two United States senators and two state railroad commissioners will be made Thursday by Tennessee Democrats and Republicans in simultaneous state-wide primaries. Candidates for nine seats in the national House of Representatives and 132 in the legislature also will be chosen.

Estimates of the vote in the Democratic primary ranged from 240,000 to 260,000, and in the Republican from 180,000 to 190,000. There is only one state-wide Republican contest.

Chief interest centers in the race between Gov. Hill McAllister and Lewis S. Pope, Nashville lawyer, for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination for a two-year term, and in the contest between Senator Nathan L. Bachman and Representative Gordon Browning of Huntington for Democratic nomination to the senate for the two years remaining of the term for which Cordell Hull was elected.

Bachman was appointed by Governor McAllister when Hull resigned early last year to enter the Roosevelt cabinet and by virtue of that appointment will serve until the November election. Both Bachman and Browning pledge full co-operation with the president, but have attacked the legislative records of each other.

Langer had annulled his citizenship rights. Langer was removed from the governorship two weeks ago on the same issue by a decision of the State Supreme Court. Ole H. Olson, a bitter political foe, was designated acting governor by the tribunal's decision. Arrangements had been completed in caucus for Langer's resignation and Mrs. Langer's endorsement before the committee met.

Paralleling in some respects the "Ma" Ferguson case in Texas, the impeachment of Jim Ferguson as governor was followed by the election of his wife as executive. Mrs. Langer entered state politics first when her husband went on trial in federal court in May.

A home loving person, the mother of four North Dakota born daughters, she is the daughter of the late J. Cleveland Cady, widely known architect who designed New York's famous Metropolitan Opera House.

Her opponent in November will be Thomas H. Moodie, Williston newspaperman, who won the Democratic nomination. Moodie, speaking before the meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee Wednesday, called for a campaign "based on reason rather than on prejudice and hatred."

of $600,000 in bills payable.
A month and a day ago the federal grand jury indicted 13 bankers and former bankers, six of whom are named again in Wednesday's true bills.

Thus, two months after the 16 women and six men comprising the grand jury were admonished by Federal Judge Edward J. Moniet, at the start of their inquiry, not to be swayed by the prominence of any person involved, they have charged 35 men, some of the city's best known business men, with infractions of the United States banking laws.

The presidents of Michigan's two huge bank holding companies at the time of last year's banking holiday, Robert O. Lord of the Guardian group which had units in a score of Michigan cities, and E. D. Stair of the Detroit Bankers Co., whose units were confined to Detroit and vicinity, are among those indicted. Stair, publisher of the Detroit Free Press, became president of the holding company in 1932 serving without any salary.

Also under indictment are John Ballantyne, dean of Detroit bankers, former president of the Detroit Bankers Co., now president of the Manufacturers National Bank, and Wilson W. Mills, former chairman of the First National Bank, largest unit of the Detroit Bankers Co.

Georgia a "Horrible Example"
Although certain sections are worse than others in a degree of erosion that had taken place, the red clay hills of Georgia present the most completely devastated area he has seen. Mr. White said. There is no hope of improving or redeeming completely eroded farm lands of this type. The only section of the United States in which erosion has not taken place is New England, probably due to natural conditions there.

He drew an appalling picture of conditions in the western portion of the Dakotas and eastern Montana where the drouth has dried up the thin land that never should have been used for farming and winds have swept away the topsoil. He believes that it will be necessary to depopulate a large section. The only hope that he can see for this section is that the Canadian thistle, the most hearty of weeds, may take root and grow there and in perhaps a century or so build up the soil so that it gain will produce grass.

Casual observers are often deceived by the appearance of large stands of

Drop Wire to Roosevelt

A Swedish farmer who wanted to make his permanent home in this country appeared for naturalization papers.

"Are you satisfied with the general conditions of this country, Mr. Olson," he was asked.

"Yuh, sure," answered Olson.

"And does this government of ours suit you?"

"Well yuh, mostly," stammered the Swede, "only I lak to see more rain."

When it fights, the caterpillar of the puss moth spits a stream of poison liquid.

timber, he said. Old and worn-out farm lands from which the topsoil is washed away have reverted to timber growing and appear to be productive, but in reality, the top soil is so nearly gone that nothing but timber can be produced on the land.

Human Greed Produces Ruin
Mr. White spoke in particular of the section adjacent of Mankato, Wisconsin, where wheat brought $2 a bushel in 1920. Farmers of that territory were eager to reclaim swamp lands and lakes in order to increase wheat production. Instead soil erosion set in as a result of drainage activities, and successive drouth years have been highly detrimental to crop conditions.

In the vicinity of Coon Creek, Wisconsin, impractical farming methods and extravagant use of land has produced so serious a condition that Mr. White observed, during a recent stay there, that hard rain following an extended period of drouth produced serious and lasting results in soil conditions.

The remedy for soil erosion lies in leaving the protective covering on the hill-tops and avoiding grazing of cattle there, and in laying out sloping land for farming on contour lines, terracing it to prevent rain from washing it away.

Education the Only Hope

Proper education of the farmer is the only solution of the problem, Mr. White believes. Intelligent farming methods must be taught if farming is to realize present productivity and be preserved for posterity.

Following the grant of $10,000,000 for soil erosion work through the Public Works Administration in November, 1933, 24 soil erosion stations were established by the government. These work in conjunction with the Department of Agriculture, the Forestry Service and other government agencies. At Chatham, Va., an extensive preventive project covering 123,000 acres is being carried forward by government workers. Soil erosion experts not only advise farmers free of charge, but supply most of the labor and material needed to actually do the work of terracing and laying out farm land for protective treatment. The farmer is required to supply only the teams for hauling, and make other minor contributions to the project.

Mr. White has found farmers of the Northwest more resistant to the idea of soil erosion education than those of any other section. The Southern farmer, he says, is eager to cooperate and to take advantage of all suggestions offered. In Virginia and the Carolinas farmers are making notable progress in arresting erosion and preventing further damage.

I HEAR YOU'RE BUYING AN AUTOMOBILE, AND YOU'RE RIGGING UP JASON AS A CHAUFFEUR!—OF COURSE, IT'S YOUR MONEY TO SPEND AS YOU WISH, BUT DON'T YOU THINK A UNIFORMED CHAUFFEUR IS TOO BIG A SPLASH TO MAKE FROM A DIVING PLATFORM THAT HAS YOU UP ONLY A FEW THOUSAND DOLLARS!

EH?—AH-OH—BUT, M'DEAR-UM-KAFF-KAFF—I AM ENGAGING JASON AS A CHAUFFEUR SIMPLY BECAUSE, AS A MAN OF LETTERS AND SCIENCE, I CANNOT MASTER THE GADGETS THAT ACTUATE A MOTOR VEHICLE TO GO, OR CEASE MOTION! UM-AH—MY MIND IS ATTUNED TO THE HIGHER BRACKETS OF SCIENTIFIC SUBJECTS!

To A GREAT MIND, THE SIMPLE IS INTRICATE.

BOOTS AND HER BUDDIES The Old Story!

BOOTS NEVER INTENDED TO TELL RONNIE ABOUT THOSE TALKS SHE HAD WITH AGATHA AND HIS MOTHER, BUT SHE HAD TO! HOW ELSE COULD SHE MAKE HIM UNDERSTAND?

OH, I HATE MYSELF, RONNIE! I'VE BEEN SPITEFUL, N'CHILDISH! I LED YOU ON—BUT, I JUST COULDN'T HELP IT! I MEAN, IT WAS SUCH A SLAP IN TH' FACE, TH' WAY AGATHA TALKED T'ME—I COULDN'T RESIST FIGHTIN' BACK! NOW, YOU KNOW WHY I DELIBERATELY ENCOURAGED YOU, WITHOUT STOPPIN' T'REALIZE WHAT IT MIGHT LEAD TO—AN' YOU MISUNDERSTOOD! OH, RONNIE—I'M SO SORRY

I AM, TOO, BOOTS—BUT, PLEASE DON'T BLAME YOURSELF! YOU DID JUST WHAT ANYONE ELSE WOULD DO

By MARTIN

THAT'S JUST IT—THAT'S WHY I'M SO ASHAMED! BUT, I WANT YOU T'KNOW I WASN'T JUST PLAYIN' A GAME! OH, I WASN'T!! I GUESS I'VE NEVER REALLY THOUGHT MUCH ABOUT MY FEELINGS TILL THIS MINUTE, WHEN YOU ASKED ME IF—I LOVED YOU! CAN YOU EVER FORGIVE ME, RONNIE?

THERE'S NOTHING TO FORGIVE, DEAR! I'VE NEVER KNOWN AS HONEST A PERSON AS YOU ARE! IT'S JUST AS NATURAL FOR YOU TO BE TRUE TO YOURSELF AS TO EVERYONE ELSE! YOU'RE THE MOST WONDERFUL GIRL—

AN' YOU'RE TH' MOST WONDERFUL BOY! OURS HAS BEEN ONE OF TH' CLOSEST, SWEETEST, FINEST FRIENDSHIPS I'VE EVER KNOWN, AN', RONNIE—WE MUSTN'T ALLOW ANYTHING TO EVER CHANGE THAT
